The re-opening of Tweedside Methodist Church will take place on Sunday, Oct. 1, at 11 a.m. and 7.30 p.m. Rev. Mr. McLaughlin, of GRIMSBY, will preach. Mr. Crocker, soloist, of Brantford, will sing at both services, assisted by Rock Chapel Choir in the evening.

The Women's Institute is out for accommodation for the traveling public in Beamsville and will interview the council on the matter shortly. If the institute can succeed along these lines, and no doubt it will, it will have accomplished a task indeed.

Lieut. J. Arthur Livingston has been ordered by the Military authorities to remain at a convalescent home in Toronto in order that he may receive proper treatment for his wounded left leg in the hope that it may be sufficiently strengthened so that he can walk on it. He will be home every week end.

Notice—It is to notify the public that unless a small account for twenty-five cent advertisements are paid promptly we will refuse to take advertisements of this kind over the telephone. It is impossible for us to carry twenty-five cent accounts through our books and pay postage when we render them, so that people who wish to send in advertisements by telephone must remit promptly or we will stop taking them altogether.

The friends of Mr. Jaeger Beck, collection man for the H. G. & E. electric railway company at GRIMSBY and Beamsville, will learn with regret of the fact that the slight accident which he sustained to one of his limbs a month or two ago has developed into a very bad case and he is now in the Hamilton Hospital undergoing treatment.

Notice—J. D. McGregor, commission merchant, Ottawa, wishes to announce to the fruit growers of GRIMSBY and vicinity that he is prepared to handle their fruit on commission in first class style and to secure for them top market prices. Sales accounts sent every day and a cheque for each week's goods sent every Monday on local bank. For full particulars and for stamps apply to the Agent at GRIMSBY, D. E. Swartz, Phone 215.

MILLINERY AND DRESSMAKING

We invite you to call this week and see the new modes and smart styles in dressmaking. A look ahead will convince you that you ought to be planning your wardrobe for the coming season. Come in and let us take your measure.

We have a good assortment of Fall millinery in all the leading colors and styles, at the best possible values to obtain.

J. J. Wilson, accused of stealing a large sum of money from John Monaghan of Grassies, appeared before Justice of the Peace Drope on Wednesday afternoon last and was sent up for trial before Judge Campbell.

POTATOES! POTATOES!—We are expecting a car of Government inspected No. 1 white potatoes here the last of this week. Send in your order now as they are being taken up very fast and will be cheaper delivered direct from the car. Thos. Bros., phone 1.

Notice—I beg to remind the public that I am still in business at the old stand and doing general repair and blacksmith work of all kinds. Prompt attention to all repair orders. I have on hand at present a number of rubber pump buckets, parties requiring these should apply while the stock lasts. Rome P. VanDyke, Mountain St., GRIMSBY.

The Right Honourable Benjamin Headly, Mayor of St. Anna, Chairman of the St. Anna Creek Harbor Commission, and Master of the Mod Creek Band, and County Cop Extraordinary, was a visitor in GRIMSBY on Tuesday receiving old acquaintances, and also for the purpose of spending a good meal from some of his friends in this vicinity. Ben Headly looks hale and hearty and arrived in town driving a stylish roadster weighing about 2500 lbs. Come again Ben.

We have the goods. Never before has our position as a manufacturer put us in such a good position to undersell our competitors, and at the same time give you the most reliable goods. Take Black and Blue Western Sallies and Grey and Black Meltons. We bought the piece goods over a year ago, and make them up week by week as we need them, thus keeping our style up-to-date, and giving you the old values. For your own sake, as well as ours, see our goods before you buy. Give us a look, we are satisfied our values will make the sale. Always at your service. We give premium tickets. Farrar, Clothing, Manufacture, 5 Market Square, Hamilton.

LOOK OUT FOR THE DOGS—A R. Henry's bull dog apparently went mad on Tuesday evening and before it was shot had worried possibly a dozen dogs in town and severely bit Councillor C. T. Farrell. Every dog seen on the street will be shot on sight.

GENUINE THERMOS KITS

We are selling genuine thermos kits fitted with genuine thermos pint bottles, for $3 complete. This is the best value we have had in this line for some time. Also a new style pint thermos bottle at $2 that is good value at Parke & Parke's, Market Square.

MR. ALEX. A. TWEEDLE WILL HOLD AN AUCTION SALE

Mr. Alex. A. Tweedle, living one and one-half miles east of Grimsby, on the stone road, in the township of Humberston, will hold an auction on Wednesday, October 11, 1910, a long list of horses, cattle, hogs, poultry, implements, and household furniture will be offered for sale. Sale commences sharp at twelve o'clock. Terms, twelve months credit. Livingston & Neil, auctioneers.

BIBLE SOCIETY DAY

One of the comforting things that comes to us from the far-flung battle line is the eagerness with which soldiers in all the countries engaged eagerly seize the opportunity to secure a portion of Scripture. In the grim struggle the common cry is for something substantial and abiding to give them comfort and a sure hope should it be their lot to fall in the fray.

As these portions of Scripture are freely given to them some one must foot the bill—what one thing of greater value can be given them in their days of trial? Let us rally to their help.

On the coming Sunday Nov. 6, Humberston, a representative of the Bible Society, is to be in GRIMSBY and it has been arranged for him to speak in the Anglican Church at 11 a.m. in the Presbyterian Church at 2.30 p.m. in the Baptist Church at 7 p.m. and in give an illustrated address at 8.15 p.m. in the Methodist Church. It is expected that a crowded house will greet Mr. Farnard at the last appointment as the modern views are both interesting and instructive and will be well worth seeing.

FRUIT FOR THE SOLDIER BOYS

The committee who were appointed in August to secure contributions of fruit to be sent to Hamilton to be canned for the soldier boys at the front reports to THE INDEPENDENT that quite a number of fruit-growers who promised contributions of fruit have so far failed to deliver.

The committee are very anxious that the contributions be delivered to the cold storage plant as soon as possible as the season is drawing to a close and if the contributions are not received within a few days it will be too late, especially for peaches and pears.

The committee are very anxious that as large an amount as possible be sent forward from this district and they urge the growers to devote a little time to the delivery of the amount of fruit that they have promised.

The committee would also be pleased to receive contributions from parties who have not yet promised. Pears, grapes and apples will be very acceptable and the season for them is now on. Kindly do not overlook this matter. Fruit means very little to the people in this district, but it is a tremendous luxury to the boys at the front.

STONEY CREEK HORSE GUARDS ARE CRACK SHOTS

Stoney Creek, Sept. 22.—The Stoney Creek company of the Home Guard proved its superiority over a number of Hamilton companies in a membership and in shooting competition. This company was formed by Col. Sgt. J. H. Jones, who has always taken part in its progress. It has also made further headway by having uniforms for all its members joined up for overseas it is still hoped to swell the ranks with new recruits.

The most exciting match place Thursday evening, when Hamilton company No. 3 journeyed here and pitted up 300 points against the home team's 250 points, being made by ten men, which is the biggest score that has yet been made through out the competition. In the match seven possibilities were made by D. Depp, L. T. Springstead, G. Buckridge, W. Nelson, J. Walker, W. Bland, A. Marshall, of Stoney Creek, and a possible by G. Stark, of the visitors.

Drills for the future months will immediately be arranged and it is hoped that anyone who is not able to join overseas battalions will acquaint himself on any drill night for membership to Capt. J. Walker or Sgt. Jones.

FULTON

A large number from here attended the Southville Fair last Friday and report it a great success.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Henderson of Beamsville, visited relatives here recently.

Mrs. W. Cooper and her little daughter of Hamilton, have been visiting at her former home here.

Mr. W. Stapley was home from Dundas for the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Young visited friends in York on Sunday last.

The annual R. R. Rally day will be observed in the Stone Church on Sunday next.

Mrs. Phillip Peck, an old and well-known resident of this place, died on Tuesday last and was buried on Thursday.

JAMES BOWLAND WILL HOLD AN AUCTION SALE

Mr. James Bowland, living four miles west of Smithville and two and a half miles east of Fulton on the Buckhorn Road, South GRIMSBY, has decided to give up farming and will hold an auction sale on Tuesday, October 3rd, when he will offer without reserve all his farm stock and implements. Sale will commence at one o'clock sharp. Terms twelve months. Jas. A. Livingston, auctioneer.

FAIR WARNING

I wish to give notice that trespassing on my farm on the River Road, known as the Southern Farm road, comes or I will prosecute the parties to the fullest extent of the law. I also wish to warn those who have been stealing the fruit and especially carrying away half ripe grapes in baskets to bear in mind that I will have them arrested for stealing. If they continue to come on the farm, any person or persons coming on this farm unless to work will be treated as trespassers and summarily removed by a magistrate. Jas. A. Livingston.

NO THREE GRADE OF FRUIT

Ottawa, Sept. 27, 1910.—The Inspection and Sale Act, Part IX, requires that all fruit packed in a closed package and intended for sale, shall be marked with one of the following grade marks: Fancy, No. 1, No. 2 or 3. The grade: Fancy, No. 1 and No. 2 are defined, but unfortunately the Act does not define the No. 3 grade, specifying only that the face or shown surface of the package shall honestly represent the contents of the package. Therefore any inferior fruit may be marked No. 3 so long as it is honestly faced.

In view of the fact that large quantities of fruit will be graded No. 3 this season I would suggest that packers place some distinctive mark on the package other than No. 3 that would indicate the quality of the No. 3 fruit in the package. For example, if the fruit is large or of fine quality but owing to some defects would not grade up to No. 2, the following marks are suggested: Large No. 3, Special No. 3, or Good No. 2. This would make known to the trade that the fruit in the package so stamped was of better quality than the fruit ordinarily packed No. 3.

In order to protect such a practice from abuse the fruit inspectors are instructed to inspect such packages very thoroughly to see that the quality of the fruit is as the marks would indicate. If the apples are marked “Good No. 3” we would expect them to be better than the ordinary run of No. 3's if they are marked “Special No. 3” the inspectors would expect to find them of special quality for the grade.

MR. AND MRS. C. A. GRIFFIN HOLD THEIR SILVER WEDDING

The home of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Griffin, South GRIMSBY, was the scene of a very pleasant gathering on Friday last, Sept. 16th, when they celebrated their silver wedding. Twenty-five years ago Charles Griffin had the honor of wedding Miss M. Chase to the marriage altar. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. James Gibson, of St. Catharines. The guests on Friday last consisted of the immediate relatives of the family, viz.: Mr. and Mrs. George and Miss Edna Griffin, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Gibson, Smithville; Mr. and Mrs. D. H. and Master Ward Griffin, Windsor; Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Griffin, Mr. and Mrs. R. Henslip, of St. Catharines; Mr. and Mrs. Gibson, of Windsor; Mrs. M. Thomson, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Helen Baker, Mr. and Mrs. Archie Griffin and daughter, Smithville; Rev. G. W. and Mrs. Down.

The bride was the recipient of many congratulations and the esteem in which she is held by the family circle was evident in the beautiful presents received on tokens of good will and appreciation.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Griffin have the hearty congratulations and best wishes of their numerous friends, who hope they will be spared to see a great many years together, and have a happy and prosperous course through the remainder of life's voyage.

The Review joins in extending hearty congratulations.—Smithville Review.

BEAMSVILLE FAIR A GREAT SUCCESS

Beamsville has had many successful fairs but never a more successful one from every point of view than that held on Wednesday, Sept. 20, 1916. The day was a beautiful one, neither too hot nor too cold, a pleasant breeze and lots of sunshine. The crowd was a monstrous one being considerably larger than last year and last year was almost a record attendance.

The exhibits in the hall and the ring in front of the grandstand were equal if not superior to that of any previous year. The exhibition of live stock, while being of excellent merit was not very large.

There was an unusually fine lot of horses in every class and the speed events were so closely contested that the grandstand rang with applause during every heat.

In the free-for-all John R. Hal showed his ability to step very fast, giving a great exhibition in the last of his three winning heats as he went out to show what he could do, pacing the last half over a heavy track in 1:07.

In the 2:22 class it took five hard heats to find the winner, Peter Foster finally winning the race after some very close finishes with Dan Patchen, C. E. Barr's very clever three-year-old colt.

The local race furnished great sport for the crowd and a big surprise for some of the horsemen when Abe Tafford's Sydney Sprague succeeded in winning the last three heats in splendid style after Clara Wilkes had won one heat and Baby Allerton had won two heats.

An added feature was the appearance of the 2nd. divisional cycle corps of twenty men from St. Catharines who gave a series of drills in front of the grandstand. The members of the corps made their wheels with a speed and precision that delights the people.

Despite the war, the turnout of automobiles on the grounds was amazing. At one time there must have been easily four hundred motors lined up along the track.

Although the classes were not large, some very good shows being shown. In Shropshire, the bulk of the prizes went to A. Shields, a Canfield, while Southdowns were divided fairly equally between J. W. Springstead & Co., Canister Centre, and C. A. Springstead, of the same place. A. E. Field-Marshal won everything in Dorsets, while the Leicester awards went to John Packham & Sons and D. M. Shaw & Sons, Canister and Southdowns, respectively.

Dorham cattle showed up splendidly and there was a hot competition right through the class. The herd of Harvey Pawell, Jordan, was well to the fore, with A. F. Kinney, of St. Ann's next, and Fred Eckhardt, of Clinton, coming in third. A. Wyna, of Grimsby, had two fine yearlings that received a couple of red tickets.

Wilson McPherson & Sons practically swept the class in Ayrshires while Jersey was equally divided between Ivan L. Moote and Lucien Moote, of St. Ann's.

Judges of Stock
The judges in the stock classes were:
Harness turnouts--A. J. Howden, Columbus.
Mares and colts--O. Allen Smith, Sandford.
Cattle--J. W. Richardson, Caladons.

Sheep--D. H. Moyer, Campden.
Poultry--H. F. Vidal, Beamsville.
Speed--J. A. Hamilton, starter.
M. Tafford, judges; W. J. Reid, James, Homer, judges; W. J. Reid, James, Homer, judges.

Orchard and Farm Products
An excellent display of products was made by the horticultural experimental station at Jordan Harbor, in a space of fifteen feet in the hall was arranged a marvelous showing of boxed fruits in tiers, exotic plants and vegetables, the work reflecting most creditably on the staff who had charge of the work, and being the centre of an admiring throng all day.

SWIMMERS FAIR A BIG SUCCESS THIS YEAR

For the first time in several years the swim gradually showed a 4.1 its glory on the fall exhibition of the Peninsular Central Agricultural society which was held at Beamsville, Ont. Sept. 22. As a result of the glorious weather the fair grounds were swarmed yesterday with people of the Village and the surrounding country, who joined in saying that this year's fair eclipsed all the former occasions in everything but in the exhibits of fruit, grain and vegetables, which were much below the average. The crowd was estimated at over 4,000, the total being swelled by several hundred school children who attached to the grounds in a bus, automobile parties were a big feature of the attendance.

The exhibits in the main building were noticeably smaller than in other years. According to the officials, this was natural, owing to the fact that this autumn has been the worst for most fruits, grain and vegetables that the farmers have experienced in years. Corn, potatoes, cauliflower, in fact most of the articles grown in the district were very meagerly represented owing to the fact that the drought has rendered the crop almost negligible in some districts. The exhibition of women's work in the main building was however, of unusual merit, there being a greater number of exhibits than for some time past and the work of a high order. The poultry exhibit was one of the surprises of the fair. It far surpassed all the other shows of poultry held in Beamsville, both in numbers and in the quality of the lot exhibited.

The entries in the various classes of riding and dray horses were at the highest order and J. E. Orr, government judge and E. D. Barr, superintendent of riding horses, were hard pressed to pick the winners in the various classes, their choices being as follows:

Roadster team--Charles Buffon, George Kovel, William Weaver.
Single roadster trotter--Charles Buffon, C. Tafford, Calver Bros.
Single roadster pacer--A. E. Ray, J. H. Weaver, George Kovel.

Carriage team--John Tafford, M. I. Tafford, R. A. Wardell.

"All right, Betty," he responded, and his voice was dull with remorse. "It is a square game, but never mind. Why, you talk like you think I ain't honest! But I won't argue you—just leave it to your own feelings. You won't help me now, but I told you when nobody else would, and I have raised you the best that I could."

The reproach cut deep into the heart of the sensitive girl. After all, she had no proof of her suspicions, and she owed much to this man. The room in which they stood seemed to fade away, and she saw a rugged land of hills and water worn gulches and the raw wash of crude mining operations. Near a rugged crest several rough miners were busily completing the filling of a grave. To one side a small girl, weeping miserably, was trying to make a bundle of a few poor belongings. With a pitying catch in her throat, Betty realized that this child was she. Late the scene there came a jaunty horseman, and to him the miners explained that they had found this prospector all caked in and had planned him and were ready to go their ways. No, they hadn't figured out what was to become of the kid. They couldn't push her along with them. Why didn't he take her? He was so particularly concerned! Whereupon the jaunty horseman looked at the pretty child in speculative manner, nodded, spoke kindly and lifted her to the pommel of his saddle, and the child sobbed her gratitude against his breast. And through the years that had followed he had been kind, in his way, and had raised her the best he could—far better, in fact, in the matter of schools and clothing than the other girls she had known. Surely he had a right to command some return. Betty looked up with tear dimmed eyes.

"I'll do it, Monte," she said simply. "I know you wouldn't go back on an old friend, Betty," Carson replied, concealing the relief and satisfaction he felt.

The next day Lord Cecil went for a stroll in the park, his mind now at ease than it had been for some time. With the $25,000 he could at least meet the demands of his more pressing creditors, or, in this land of opportunity and quick fortunes, he could probably use it as capital for investment and soon acquire enough to pay all his debts. These reflections were cut short by a woman's scream, and Cecil looked ahead to see a girl—grasping in the grasp of two men, who strove to force her into a closed taxicab. As the girl's cry for help again rang out Cecil sprang forward. There was a brief conflict, the two ruffians sprang into the cab, which sped away, and Cecil found himself supporting a slender form.

"Oh, will you protect me?" the girl begged piteously.

"Now, everything is perfectly all right," Cecil said soothingly and led her to a seat. "What were those brutes up to?"

An imp of mischief danced in the eyes that Betty kept carefully veiled by lowered and silky lashes. Despite her uneasy conscience, she was beginning to enjoy the game. She sighed with tragic intensity.

"It is but a part of the base conspiracy to rob my poor father of his fortune," she said sadly, and stole a glance from the corner of her eye.

Lord Cecil was interested, there was no doubt of that. Had she remarked that she expected to have run her for dinner he would have been interested, because it was she who said it, but this he did not yet realize.

Betty felt the thrill of the artist inspired to do a perfect thing, and, with growing enthusiasm she told a wonderful tale—of her poor father, who had discovered two wonderful rich mines; how, because he would not sell them for a song he was falsely accused of crime; how, having no money to defend himself in the British courts, they had been forced to flee, how they had hoped to sell one of the mines and thus acquire ready money to protect the father and develop the other mine—the one would yield quite a large fortune as they desired; how the father, ill, did not dare go forth to attempt to make a sale, the villain being close upon their track. She concluded sturdily and stole another glance at Cecil, and she saw that he lowered her.

"Put my word! Quite extraordinary, I know," he said.

"And now I must go," Betty said, and rose indifferently. "Goodbye."

"That you can't," I know, really!" she protested earnestly. "These things may be talked about sometimes, but they don't happen."

"You are good and brave. I would have liked you," Betty said softly and Without adventure they reached the boarding house, and Cecil required no urging to meet and be thanked by the poor father.

"I wouldn't mind so much, if it wasn't for Betty," Carson said with a sighing effect, after he had wrung Cecil's hand in gratitude. "But it is hard on her, poor little girl, this bidding in miserable hotels when she might be in a palace—and you see that even she is in danger. If they didn't follow us close I could get out and end one of the mines, and the money for everything all right. Either mine is enough for me, anyhow—worth a million."

Lord Cecil heard but vaguely. His eyes had been fixed on Betty with a look that had caused her to turn quickly away, suddenly shamed and confused, but with a strange brightness dawning in her heart. Moreover, he was pondering a great idea, and it occupied his mind.

"My dear, I have it! I'll buy one of the mines, I know, if I have enough money!"

It was with difficulty that Carson convinced his father, Betty half strangled from her chair, a protest upon her lips, but at Carson's look of stern reproach she sank back speechless. The amount which Cecil could pay appeared a great disappointment to her. Carson, but ten minutes later he had returned for a check for $25,000, properly indorsed, handed over the entire capital stock of the "Golden Hope" mine. Within half an hour after Cecil's departure the check had been cashed.

Very early the following morning Mr. Monte Carson, in whose pocket there nestled a thick packet of yellow bills, and Betty, in whose heart was an aching pain, and from whose eyes the smile had gone leaving only the weariness, boarded a train destined for the far west.

Later in the same day Lord Cecil, with somewhat rueful expression, read the following concise epistle:

Brown & Co., Mining Stock Brokers, New York:

Lord Cecil, Sir—Telegraphic inquiry received the fact that the "Golden Hope" mine is worthless. We can, therefore, secure no loan on your stock. Very truly, BROWN & CO.

Cecil put aside the letter and lighted a cigarette. As he smoked he pondered and a great light seemed suddenly to break upon him.

"By Jove! I believe that whole story was a jolly, I know," he said aloud.

"But she was certainly a ripper! This girl!" he added thoughtfully.

CHAPTER VI

"The Golden Hope."

LORD CECIL, in his apartment in the Hotel Triumph, was writing a letter.

"Dear old chap," it ran.

"Thanks for the information—they really can't make it in this country—most extraordinary!"

"I rather think I have been done. Bought a mine, which a broker person tells me is worthless, but not a ripper little girl. It leaves me flat broke, so she goes west to dig some gold; doesn't bother."

Cecil paused, then added:

"Am sending this by James, Tom might give him a sensation. He prides on his trousers quite fairly."

The letter was addressed and sealed as James entered.

"You will take this letter to the prince, James," his master said, and, because of a flitting of training, the face of the servant gave no sign of the grief that sprang into his heart.

"Very well, my lord," James said quietly.

"Very well, my lord," James said quietly. "There is a steamer sailing tomorrow, my lord."

"You will need passage money, James, and the hotel bill must be settled, and I'll want some money myself, for railway fare to the west," Cecil said, and his thoughtfulness provoked an anxious glance from his man. "Take all the studs and links, as of things, that you can find and get what you can—don't I should fancy they will bring from some pawnshop place, I know."

"Yes, my lord," James responded and went into the study.

Early the next morning Lord Cecil boarded the same train that a few days before had borne back to the golden west the man who had brought up his dire misfortune, but who had left her picture in his heart.

To Betty the thought of the part she had played in the disappointment of the clear-eyed, kindly stranger, was a haunting shame from which she could not escape, for she now fully understood—and the understanding marked the day when the bud of grief had become the perfect blossom of womanhood—the degradation that had been put upon her, in that her youth and her had been used, through an appeal to all that was most brave and kind in his nature, to do as he bade her, that she would not believe that a girl might do.

Mr. Monte Carson's return had been that of a conqueror. Very shortly, however, his business instincts reasserted themselves, and he was so engaged in a determined effort to recoup the money which he had so magnificently cast abroad among the citizens of Salt Springs. Following his usual method when doing business with the natives, he was playing poker in the office bar of the Palace hotel. Opposite him, and the laughing lion, sat a young miner, Dave. A jackpot was opened, and after the draw only Carson and Dave held their cards, the gambler's being barely visible above the edge of the table.

The pipe which the young miner had been smoking fell to the floor. He stooped quickly to retrieve it, and Carson's spiteful goddess of luck, laughing mockingly, deserted him. It was the precise instant that Dave stooped that Carson chose to extract two cards from his pocket. Dave straightened with a jerk, and so he looked far across the table his blue eyes blazing.

"You dirty, cheating thief!" he snarled, and swiftly the crowding men sprang back from what they knew would follow.

It was at this moment of close hovering tragedy that Betty entered, and for an instant too short to be accounted, yet long enough for many thoughts to flash through her brain, as for Carson to grow white and limp as he looked into Death's eyes, the girl stood motionless. Then he darted forward and caught Dave's arm, already beginning to downward swing with gleaming knife.

"Don't do that, please," she said to him, and her voice was so sweet a yearning that it reached Dave's rage and brain.

have fallen had not Betty sprung to his assistance.

"I'll help you into the hotel. There is no one else," she stammered.

With the girl's aid Cecil reached a room and collapsed upon the bed. Betty bent anxiously over him, but he was unconscious.

"He must have a doctor," she whispered and hastened away.

Fortunately the doctor had not joined the stampede for the gulch and hurried with Betty to the hotel. Telling him where he would find the stranger, she herself walked rapidly away from the town. Not far out she met Mr. Bayler and his fellow townsmen, dusty and in despair.

"Every claim was already mined," he told her angrily, but Betty indifferently passed on.

At the end of a week Lord Cecil was still in bed, but steadily improving.

Mr. Bayler was troubled. A very careful examination of Cecil's scanty baggage had failed to disclose either money or articles of value. It was possible that the guest had hidden his gold during some secret moment, but Mr. Bayler doubted. He decided to make a demand for money.

"But I haven't any. You'll have to wait until I can dig some gold, I know," Cecil answered cheerfully, and after a moment of strained paralysis the landlord exploded wrathfully.

"You don't think I'm a fool?" he roared. "Try to skin me are you? Wait till you dig some gold! You'll pay up pretty soon or be licked out, you bet!"

The window of the room was open, and sounds carried well in the clear air. Betty, sitting beside her own window in the adjoining room, felt tears of anger and grief trickling down her cheeks.

"And it is all my fault—mine!" she whispered sadly.

Cecil was distinctly annoyed. This landlord was evidently a person quite lacking in reasonableness. It would be vastly more agreeable to have the brute satisfied. He pondered for a moment and then produced from his pocket a packet of stock certificates.

"I say," he suggested, "suppose you take this 'Golden Hope' mine in payment of your bill?"

Mr. Bayler gazed in contempt.

"'Golden Hope'—why, I wouldn't give you a piece of bread for that hole in the ground! You pay up in good cash or out you go, say Mr. Betty!"

After which Mr. Bayler stalked from the room.

There is a certain pattern of much given to fortunate accounts of the success of mobility in Europe and society leaders in America, which has vague and extensive circulation in these sections of the west which most loudly express their utter scorn and boundless contempt for both these sentimental citizens. And fate would that almost simultaneously, a certain paragraph should be read by the excellent Mr. Bayler, Betty and Monte Carson.

Mr. Bayler was indulging his literary proclivities behind his door. Betty not beside her bedroom window, and Mr. Carson was leaning suitably against the door frame of a saloon in a town some twenty miles from Salt Springs. The paragraph was this:

LORD CECIL IN LUCK.
Gold Rich From Pure Metal.

Recently Lord Cecil of England purchased the "Golden Hope Mine," only to find by mining experts that it was worthless. It now appears that the mine is the richest claim in Sandy Creek, where incredibly rich veins have just been developed. Lord Cecil's mine is worth at least $1,000,000. The lucky nobleman is supposed to be in the west inspecting his property.

"The 'Golden Hope' mine might have given the stock away!" Betty gasped, and then her heart leaped joyously. It was all right, after all. Cecil would not think of her as a lying wretched, now that the truth exceeded even the promise of her fantastic tale to him. Then her head drooped wearily.

"No," she whispered, "this good fortune is only chance. I cannot forget that the intent was to rob him."

From the adjoining room again came the voice of Mr. Bayler, but it was now hoarse and stern.

"I reckon I was kind of mean awhile ago, partner," he said, "but to show no more feeling for a guest down on his luck. I ain't such a bad guy when you get to know me, or, just to prove it, I'll take that stock on 'em the board bill paid."

Like a darting bird Betty was out of her room and burst wildly into that of Lord Cecil.

"No, no! Don't give him the mine!" she cried and breathlessly told Cecil of the change that had come to the fortune.

"Aw," Cecil observed calmly, and turned to the landlord.

"I guess I can't let you have the stock, after all, I know," he said.

With lowering brow, on which the sweat was cutting grimy little channels through the dust, Mr. Monte Carson strode into the Palace bar. With a fine effort at indifference and politeness ignoring their hot noising, he addressed the landlord.

"Heard there was an Englishman d-d-d-d around the country. Is he puttin' up with you, Bayler?" he asked, and even his gambler's eyes could not avoid a viciously glaring gleaming.

Mr. Bayler looked at him with a snarling laugh.

"He's here, all right, but it won't do you no good," he informed him maliciously. "That little pot of yours' done tipped him off, else I'd a had that mine by now. He offered it for the board."

Mr. Carson pondered.

"Any folks know he offered for board?" he demanded.

"Yep, all the boys. I told 'em. You like to laugh and give to death. Don't seem so funny now," the landlord replied gloomily.

Carson drew nearer, and his voice

"Well, he offered it to you again, and you took it—well," he said, and with significance shifted forward his gun. "Fifty fifty. You cut?"

"I always did say you was a damn to the state, Monte," Mr. Bayler declared. "I think admire you. Let's get it all fixed up before some game comes straight in here."

In the corridor outside her door Betty heard mutinous footsteps and gunshots. Moving softly to the door, she applied her eye to the thin boards, and what she heard sent her back into the room with a blanched face. A small but excellent revolver lay upon her dresser, and she snatched it eagerly, and, leaning from the window, called with restrained eagerness.

"Lord Cecil! At the window—quick!" she whispered, and immediately Cecil's head appeared.

"Take this and shoot first!" Betty said, and, leaning far out, handed him the revolver.

Barely had Cecil faced back into the room when the door was unceremoniously thrust open, and Monte, Carson and Bayler, guns in hand, stood before him. Cecil laughed, and the little revolver sprang viciously twice. With explosive force and movements, the villain dropped their guns and grappled at the right forearms, from which red blood was spurting.

"You are not hurt, really, I know," he said right in a fortnight. I dare say," Cecil remarked dispassionately.

The stage which left for the next day carried Lord Cecil as a passenger, the new service and obliging

MILLINERY

This department is again in charge of Miss Lee. That statement is sufficient to warrant the success of the department and the satisfaction of our many customers. A few remarks, however, may not be out of place.

First:—Practically everything was cleaned up last year. The stock is all new and fresh, and can't fail to please.

Second:—We aim to give our patrons stylish, reliable goods, and at the same time keep the prices within reach of the people who are not millionaires.

Third:—Miss Lee has spent two months in Toronto, London, Detroit, San-dusky, and other American and Canadian cities and believes she has the last word in new ideas.

Fourth:—All orders will be gotten out promptly as we have the staff and don't sleep in the day time.

DRESS GOODS

In years past we advertised "New Dress Goods." This creates the question is where can old values and qualities be found. While we admit our stock is smaller than in some past seasons, we can truthfully say that some excellent values in black, navy, green, red, grey and brown can still be found on our shelves. These comprise cashmere, pongee, serge, poplin, satin cloth and fancy dress goods.
